As a grant giving organization, we nurture sustainable learning communities using the natural world as our guide Children have grown their own lunches, designed and planted gardens, and mapped out the cycles and flows in their communities Each project is unique to the environment in which it occurs, and yet each represents the principles of ecology in action

We have learned from our work with communities in schools that learning will flourish, on a school-wide or district-wide level, when efforts are made to nurture a collaborative culture throughout the school community, integrate the curriculum around a shared conceptual language, and engage the natural world, especially by exploring the place or ecosystem in which learning is embedded As a part of this work, we nurture networks of grantees and encourage them to work collaboratively and exchange information and resources

Statement of Program Service Accomplishments

The Center for Ecoliteracy (CEL) is dedicated to education for sustainability by fostering a profound understanding of the natural world, grounded in direct experience The Center operates a grant giving program, convenes networks of its grantees, manages a publishing imprint, and sponsors projects consistent with its mission

GRANT GIVING: Learning in the Real World
The Center for Ecoliteracy provides financial support to schools and educational organizations in the San Francisco Bay Area engaged in fostering ecological literacy through strategies focusing on "learning in the real world" CEL scouts for promising programs embedded in schools, communities and ecosystems, and funds those that are both practical and inspirational Grant giving strategies include gardens, food, cooking and sustainable agriculture, as well as habitat restoration and watersheds Twenty grants were awarded to 17 schools and organizations

GRANTEE NETWORKS: Learning in the Real World
The Center for Ecoliteracy nurtures grantee networks consisting of school principals, school-based leadership teams, and support providers as incubators for creative approaches to fostering ecological literacy CEL convenes meetings, seminars and educational events and provides coaching to selected grantees using the environment as the integrator for curriculum and community

PUBLICATIONS
The Center for Ecoliteracy influences a widening circle of decision makers in the fields of education and philanthropy through a publications program which articulates a conceptual framework for mapping the terrain of CEL's work and applies this conceptual map as the basis for evaluation, publication and dissemination CEL acts as a publishing resource to selected educational organizations, forming collaborations for the purpose of producing educational materials, including a web site

PROJECTS

Learning in the Real World, a project of the Center for Ecoliteracy, is a clearing house engaged in a process of analysis, study and research of broad pedagogical, social and economic issues related to the use of computers in education—particularly in regards to young children LRW encourages a vigorous public policy debate about the appropriate uses of computers in education for young children

Food Systems Project, a project of the Center for Ecoliteracy, is working to enhance food security through district-wide transformations of school nutrition services connected to instructional gardens and garden-based curriculum This whole systems approach is linking family farms to schools, tackling policy issues, and improving food access and nutritional health for families whose lives are connected to the schools through their children
