Estimates

- * Due to the destruction of records in a catastrophic flood, this return has been compiled with reconstructed financial information using bank microfiche and the best available information. Therefore, a portion of the Form 990 for 2005 is based on estimates
- * The nature of the Organization's programs require a significant portion of transactions to be conducted in cash, therefore other program expenses include cash withdrawals and other undocumented disbursements. This resulted from the nature of the community in which the Organization was working. Working in and around one of the 10 most blighted public housing developments in the U.S. (HUD designation), it was dealing with youth and their families who functioned completely in a cash economy. No one had or trusted bank accounts and many youth and adults did not have identification, therefore disbursements for youth stipends, emergency help to youth and families such as food, clothing, rent or court costs were done in cash. Staff were drawn from the community and had the same issues therefore many expense reimbursements were made in cash (ie. supplies for programs and events, costs for community gatherings, summer program recreational activities, trips, career exploration, college exploration and other such expenses)
