GLOBAL HEALTH COUNCIL
DESCRIPTION OF PROGRAMS
FY 2005

The Global Health Council is the world's largest membership alliance dedicated to saving lives by improving health throughout the world The Council works to ensure that all who strive for improvement and equity in global health have the information and resources they need to succeed. To achieve this goal, the Council serves as the voice for action on global health issues and the voice for progress in the global health field.

Policy, Advocacy, and Research

The Global Health Council serves as a voice for the tens of thousands of individuals and organizations involved in every aspect of global health, as well as a large, growing network of concerned citizens – in the U.S and abroad – who view health as a basic human right. The Council informs and educates opinion leaders, policy-makers, the media and concerned citizens about critical issues in global health in order to spur more effective investment, programs and policies. We do this in local communities, in the halls of Congress, and across the globe

- The Council educates decision-makers about the importance of investment in global health. In the U.S., congressional briefings, distribution of key research findings, and field visits are powerful tools that increase understanding of global health issues among decision-makers. Around the world, our efforts promote investment and sound policies from multilateral organizations and help our members and partners advocate effectively within their own countries Effective advocacy, the synthesis of constituent input, credible and substantive expertise, research, the mobilization of allies and opinion leaders, and an understanding of the principal actors within Congress and the Administration is the keystone of the Council's work and measurably impacts domestic and international public policy.

- The Council's Global Health Action Network is composed of citizens who stay informed and speak out to forward the global health agenda with the force and energy that current challenges require The Council's annual International AIDS Candlelight Memorial unites more than one million people in 103 countries, in remembrance of those who have died from AIDS and in support of efforts to end the pandemic Global Health Forums highlight the connection between local health concerns and global health trends, pointing out the need to address the global issues as they emerge. The Council's International Relations Program works with selected local organizations in developing countries to address the desire to be part of a broader health network We assist these groups in advocating for better health from within their own borders, by helping to forge ties between groups that share a common agenda but had previously worked in isolation The Council works with reporters and news organizations to generate media coverage and provide expert analysis, from both Council staff and from our membership, on key global health issues

- The Council compiles, analyzes, summarizes and disseminates research on illness prevention and intervention to health professionals. This is vitally important; professionals working on the front lines of global health often do not have access to the latest research, nor the time to wade through dense medical literature. The Council's unbiased, easy-to-access research summaries allow important developments to have a profound and immediate impact in health programs. The work done by the Council informs and expands dialogue on evidence-based policy and practices. This work is helping to forge a stronger link between research and its practical application to improved health and is critical to informing good policy decisions. We rigorously critique and review health-care interventions so that we can be a key resource for expanding awareness and use of improved health interventions.

Membership Resources

Our membership is comprised of some of the world's most effective organizations dedicated to advancing the most critical health issues. We work to channel their varied methodologies and objectives in pursuit of one overarching goal: better health for the world's poor and underserved.

While many serious health problems can be addressed inexpensively and effectively with the right knowledge, too often practical advances in public health are not widely shared. The Council seeks to gather such knowledge and make it accessible for those who can use it to save lives, most notably our members across the globe.

- The Council's electronic and print publications highlight important trends and innovative, effective and efficient health programs. These reference tools are vital resources for health professionals and program managers alike. The Council's regular publications, AIDSLink and HealthLink, along with its technical and research reports, reach thousands of health-care practitioners and managers. The Council's electronic publications, including its website, reach hundreds of thousands. These distribution channels ensure that vital information makes its way from universities and government offices to the most remote clinics – and the other way around – with great speed

- Since 1973, the Council has been bringing together leaders in the field of global health with practitioners and advocates at its annual international conference. The conference is the premier event of the year in the field of global health, convening thousands of public health professionals from more than 100 countries around the world to network, learn and share best practices. We build on this work throughout the year, extending the information shared to all corners of the globe. The 2005 conference, Health Systems Putting Pieces Together, featured more than 1,500 participants, bringing some of the world's leading experts together with those working on the front lines of global health, to think about and share experiences in health care, disease prevention, and health promotion from a systems perspective
