PROGRAM SERVICE ACCOMPLISHMENTS	PART III STATEMENT 1	a - Animal Hospital and Mobile Veterinary Clinics ($8,903,661) The ASPCA Bergh Memorial Animal Hospital, housed in our New York City headquarters, provided critical care to 20,831 pets in 2006, including 4,174 emergency cases. Caseload rose by 9.6%. Two board-certified veterinary staff - a surgeon and a dermatologist - joined the team along with four interns for our veterinary internship program. Staff also provided care to 299 cats and dogs rescued from abusive owners by our Humane Law Enforcement agents, and furnished crucial testimony and evidence for the prosecution. Humane population control was a primary focus for the ASPCA, not only in the support provided to shelters across the U.S. but also in our own programs. From our two fully equipped mobile veterinary clinics, the ASPCA provided 12,048 free or low-cost spay and neuter surgeries in New York City's under-served neighborhoods, a 7% increase over 2005. Our Bergh Memorial Animal Hospital performed 1,886 spays and neuters, up 5% from 2005. b - Animal Placement ($5,259,652) The ASPCA's newly renovated animal shelter will save lives in New York City and encourage humane communities nationwide. Designed to boost adoptions, the $5 million expansion and renovation - completed in the fall of 2006 - covered 12,000 square feet of interior space on two floors of the ASPCA's headquarters building. On the lobby level, The ASPCA Onyx and Breezy Shefts Adoption Center, named after two black Labrador Retrievers, now has 16 large glass enclosures for dogs, six community cat rooms and 24 individual cat habitats. Fourth floor offices were replaced with 19 dog and 112 cat habitats. The Center can now house up to 350 cats and dogs on any given day. In New York, our Adoption Center placed 2,253 dogs and cats, a 6% jump over 2005 - work aided greatly by the 34,000 hours of care given by our 631 dedicated volunteers. Cages have been replaced by pet-friendly features such as glass condos, cozy beds, use of noise-reducing materials, piped in "dog laughter" and bird songs, and 10-12 daily air exchanges that keep air fresh and limit the spread of disease. Portals allow cats to move from one unit to another, and knee-level "scent holes" in glass-fronted dog pens allow canines to sniff visitors and accept treats. Spacious playrooms allow dogs to romp and play. These and other innovations create a less stressful environment for pets and a more inviting space for visitors who are thinking about adoption. Over 50,000 unwanted pets turn up in New York City every year. This reality prompted the ASPCA and other groups to start the Mayor's Alliance for New York City's Animals and to envision a city where no adoptable animal is euthanized. c - Humane Law Enforcement ($3,696,606) Working in difficult and often dangerous situations, ASPCA Humane Law Enforcement's uniformed "animal cops" pursued 4,191 cases of animal cruelty in New York City, made a record 103 arrests, and seized 299 animals in connection with their investigations. Our high-profile agents processed over 50,000 calls and 10,000 e-mails from the public during the year. For a fifth season, millions of TV viewers tuned in to Animal Planet's popular reality show Animal Precinct to watch the ASPCA's 20 Humane Law Enforcement agents pursue cases of animal cruelty in the five boroughs of New York City. A full-time Humane Law Enforcement agent now enforces carriage horse regulations in New York City. ASPCA Humane Law Enforcement installed a Computer Aided Dispatch and Record Management System, increasing response time to individual cases, increasing the number of cases agents can take on. As part of its nationwide anti-cruelty initiative, the ASPCA fields a constant stream of requests for help investigating and prosecuting animal cruelty cases. We assisted law enforcement in the prosecution of 30 cases in 2006 and responded to over 50 major media inquiries. d - ASPCA Animal Poison Control Center ($4,416,104) The ASPCA Animal Poison Control Center in Urbana, IL, is the premier animal poison control center in North America, offering expert, lifesaving advice to pet parents and veterinarians nationwide 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. A staff of 25 veterinarians, toxicologists and veterinary technicians handled more than 116,200 cases in 2006, a 9% increase over 2005, and helped save over 84,000 animals. The 2006 National Poison Prevention Week in March focused on a consumer product safety initiative for pet owners with the U.S. EPA and included a media blitz reaching an audience of 14 million. The Veterinary Lifeline Partner Program continued to give more than 3,000 member clinics rapid access to poison control experts. In addition, the ASPCA remained a key partner in the Illinois Animal Terrorism Information Hotline, which exists to identify and respond to acts of terrorism involving animals. e - Humane Education and Shelter Outreach ($21,268,100) The ASPCA works closely with local animal shelters and other animal welfare organizations across the country. In 2006, we awarded $2,911,127 in non-hurricane shelter grants to over 200 organizations from Alaska to Florida. Our experts visited 215 shelters in 31 states, Puerto Rico and Canada. They responded to over 17,000 shelter-related inquiries, attended 164 conferences, and presented 377 workshops to 24,000 animal care professionals. Support continued for shelters and organizations located in or providing support to communities devastated by Hurricanes Katrina and Rita. Hurricane-related grants in 2006 totaled $3,702,374 for a variety of projects. We lent the bulk of our Gulf Coast support to spay/neuter recovery programs in Louisiana and Mississippi, helping build new programs and supporting local existing organizations and veterinarians impacted by the hurricanes. As part of the single largest joint funding project with four other national organizations (PetSmart Charities, HSUS, United Animal Nations and International Fund for Animal Welfare), the ASPCA helped facilitate 23,909 spay/neuter surgeries in Louisiana and Mississippi for the first year of this two-year project. The project funded a high volume spay/neuter clinic in Gulfport, Mississippi with one to open soon in Louisiana, a voucher program in Mississippi and Louisiana and "The Big Fix Rig," a 53-foot trailer that travels between the two states and is equipped to perform up to 120 cat surgeries and double as a disaster relief vehicle. Many of the surgeries were done at a discount for low-income pet owners and hurricane-impacted residents in need of help. The clinics and the Big Fix Rig will provide long-term, sustainable programs for the areas and be able to fix thousands of pets in the years to come. We also loaned full-time staff to Louisiana SPCA and the Humane Society of South Mississippi, helped rebuild facilities for both organizations, and donated six vans to various groups. Preparing for Disaster In 2006, we developed and supported disaster training and preparedness, and advised communities in their planning under the Pets Evacuation and Transportation Standards Act. We helped the United Animal Nations/Emergency Animal Rescue Service train thousands of potential volunteers to respond to disasters countrywide. The ASPCA provided expertise to our partner, the Illinois Regional Institute for Community Policy, regarding the Animal Rescue & Restore Project, addressing animal care in disaster situations. In New York State, we established the Empire State Animal Response Team (SART) strategic and tactical plan for 2007-2010. We made several $13,000 grants to various SART programs in New York. Humane Education The ASPCA raised its stature as the go-to student and teacher resource for humane treatment of animals. We added 200 pages to our Imagine Humane and Humane Education Websites, continued to attract more children to our Animaland.org site, and presented 650 programs to students, teachers, parents and others. We boosted animal-friendly children's literature and gained widespread media attention by recognizing 13 authors and illustrators with the Henry Bergh Children's Book Awards. Veterinarian Outreach Keeping a high profile in the field of veterinary medicine, ASPCA animal-care experts in 2006 addressed over 3,000 veterinarians, technicians and students at 20 conferences and universities on topics such as shelter medicine and animal abuse. Staff at the Animal Poison Control Center wrote 14 articles for veterinary journals, reviewed 47 textbook chapters, and led 37 continuing education seminars. The ASPCA, in conjunction with PetSmart Charities, organized a "Veterinary Summit to Advance Spay/Neuter" which will increase the pool of veterinarians interested in and qualified to perform high volume, high quality spay/neuter procedures and increase the credibility of such programs within the veterinary community. Encouraging the Human-Animal Bond The ASPCA Pet Loss Hotline counseled more than 400 grieving pet parents, including 75 who sought and received comfort on the ASPCA's counseling blog. The ASPCA and the Delta Society expanded our Animal-Assisted Therapy (AAT) program, trained 140 owner-dog teams, and registered 119 teams who dispensed love, hope and cheer in 15 major New York City medical and mental health facilities. The first annual Animal-Assisted Therapy Awards recognized nine teams for helping others through pet therapy. In addition, a new program to promote both AAT and adoptions, 33 dogs adopted from the ASPCA shelter were designated as Potential Pet Partners, making them eligible for free AAT training classes. ASPCA Mission Orange - A New Initiative to Save Adoptable Animals In 2006, the ASPCA finished laying the groundwork to implement ASPCA Mission Orange - a new vision for a humane country where every adoptable pet finds a loving home and where every animal is treated with compassion and respect. The ASPCA has spent years doing the research, creating the programs and building the partnerships that make the vision achievable. Shelter by shelter and community by community, the ASPCA aims to bring about immediate, measurable and sustainable change for the animals we are honor-bound to protect and care for. Anti-Cruelty Training All across the country, the ASPCA continued to share its expertise in recognizing and responding effectively to animal cruelty. From California to Florida, we conducted 92 workshops for 7,441 professionals in fields as diverse as animal care and control, veterinary medicine, law enforcement, and social and mental health services. E-Learning for Law Enforcement Animal Abuse for Law Enforcement, our web-based course offered to law enforcement professionals in Illinois, won a prestigious award from Training magazine. The course, which can be accessed from any computer, takes about 2.5 hours to complete and covers topics such as officer safety, assessing animal abuse, and evidence collection. The ASPCA plans to offer the course in other states and is developing a CD-ROM based version of police training that will be made available to law enforcement agencies nationwide. Anti-Cruelty for the Professionals ASPCA staff wrote the first textbook in the emerging field of veterinary forensics. Published in 2006, the book is a guide for veterinary and law enforcement professionals investigating animal cruelty and received an award from the Dog Writers Association of America as the "Best Reference Book" of 2006. Staff also provided training on recognizing and responding to animal cruelty at every major national veterinary conference in 2006. Juvenile Delinquency and Anti-Cruelty Our staff produced a booklet on animal cruelty prosecution for the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention at the U.S. Dept. of Justice. The booklet is downloadable from the DOJ Website, and 2,000 copies were distributed at prosecutor workshops across the country. It is now routinely used in the training of newly appointed district attorneys. Animal Behavior Center The ASPCA Animal Behavior Center, located in Urbana, Ill., advanced the field of animal behavior on several fronts. The Behavior Fellowship program graduated its third fellow, who was certified by the Animal Behavior Society and will set up practice in Tucson. Staff worked toward the launch of a national Behavior Lifeline and collaborated with the University of Illinois on a Master's program in Applied Animal Behavior f - Communications ($5,477,553) The ASPCA in 2006 used both traditional and new media to build support for treating every animal with compassion and respect. Responding to over 60,000 inquiries from concerned citizens nationwide, we offered advice on topics such as companion animals, cruelty and neglect, options for unwanted pets, and careers in animal welfare. We engaged the public at annual events such as New York's Westminster Dog Show and Canine Country Fair. A variety of public relations initiatives raised awareness of ASPCA themes. Make Pet Adoption Your First Option, We Are Their Voice and, for National Poison Prevention Week, "Read the Label First" when using household products. We secured significant national media coverage of the renovation of our animal shelter in New York City. ASPCA Mission Orange two high-profile cases of animal cruelty investigated by Humane Law Enforcement ASPCA research on the dangers of the sweetener Xylitol and events celebrating our 140-year history and anniversary. Using communications tools such as in-store audio messages, audio news releases, radio and satellite media tours and direct media outreach, we reached up to 130 million people with messages about adoption and related topics. Our quarterly ASPCA Action newsletter shared our vital work with many of our 750,000 supporters. Millions visited our dynamic Website, www.aspc.org, for expert pet advice, legislative alerts, discussion boards, educational tools, and Animaland - the Website for kids who love animals. Tips on Getting Involved To help promote April as Anti-Cruelty Month, the ASPCA used its Website and ASPCA Action quarterly magazine to convey tips on how average citizens can get involved, such as knowing how to recognize cruelty and who to call to report cruelty. ASPCA President and CEO Edw. in Sayres and Supervisory Special Investigator Annemarie Lucas plugged responsible pet ownership and warned about the dangers of puppy mills in a combined Radio and Satellite Media Tour that reached an audience exceeding 3.2 million people. g - Government Affairs and Public Policy ($1,940,613) Giving voice to animals in need, the ASPCA in 2006 was instrumental in helping pass and sign into law 74 state and federal animal protection laws. We drafted 47 state bills, attended or gave testimony at 125 hearings, issued 201 Advocacy Alerts, and fielded over 600 inquiries on animal protection laws and federal legislation. These efforts were enhanced by the 230,000 letters sent by the ASPCA Advocacy Brigade to members of Congress in support of or opposition to federal legislation. Membership in the online Brigade increased by 7,000 to over a half million animal lovers. The highlights below give insight into positions taken and victories won in 2006. Dignity for Horses The ASPCA developed a state-by-state database of alternatives to horse slaughter. We supported the Horse Slaughter Prevention Act (HR 503/S 1915), which passed in the U.S. House of Representatives but died in the Senate. With other animal welfare groups, we sued to prevent the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture from allowing slaughter plants to regulate themselves. The suit was dismissed, but we worked with other groups to continue the challenge. Animal Law Awareness We updated our "Comprehensive Guide to State and Federal Animal Protection Laws," a database that helps citizens keep track of more than 550 animal cruelty laws - and their penalties - in all 50 states. It also includes about a dozen "sample legislations" on a variety of topics to complement the law summaries and as guidance for drafting strong animal protection laws on these particular subjects. The guide expanded in 2006 with the addition of a "Best Practices" section that evaluates laws for the strongest provisions. Planning for Pets in Emergencies The Pets Evacuation and Transportation Standards (PETS) Act, supported by the ASPCA and signed into law by President Bush in October, requires states to develop pet evacuation plans before receiving federal funds for emergency preparedness. The law also authorizes FEMA to create pet-friendly shelters and assist pet parents in the aftermath of a disaster. Focus On Puppy Mills The ASPCA in 2006 put the heat on "puppy mills" - large-scale, substandard commercial dog breeding operations that confine dogs in overcrowded and unsanitary conditions and without adequate food, water, veterinary care and socialization. We researched legal strategies to pursue in 2007 and 2008, focusing on litigation and legislation as well as petitions to the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture for rule-making that would strengthen the Animal Welfare Act. We drafted model legislation, "Canine Quality Assurance and Lineage Certification Program," which defines responsible dog breeding and which was incorporated in a bill pending in the Oklahoma legislature. In Pennsylvania, the ASPCA participated in a rally at the Harrisburg state capitol to encourage state action against puppy mills, mounted letter-writing and media campaigns, and provided the evidence needed by Governor Ed Rendell to propose regulatory and legislative changes to the existing Dog Law. The ASPCA was appointed to Governor Rendell's Ad Hoc Committee on Dog Law and was instrumental in identifying weaknesses in Pennsylvania's law and regulations governing commercial breeding facilities in this "East Coast Capital of Puppy Mills." This formed the basis for the US Department of Agriculture's recently issued proposed regulations to strengthen the law. In New York, we worked to expand the definition of "pet dealer" to include breeders who "offer for sale" a requisite number of puppies to the public each year for profit. State-by-State Legislative Victories CALIFORNIA Unchaining Dogs, Protecting Pets As a result of our lobbying with other groups, California became the first state to prohibit the tethering of dogs to a stationary object except when a person is completing a temporary task. The state also made it a crime to leave a pet in a hot car. CONNECTICUT Spay/Neuter The ASPCA led efforts mandating the creation of a study group to develop recommendations for legislation concerning the vaccination and sterilization of low-income individuals' companion animals and feral cats. This directly resulted in a bill now receiving overwhelming support in the Connecticut legislature that would establish a subsidized vaccination and sterilization program for these animals. LOUISIANA, ILLINOIS Animal Evacuation In the wake of Hurricanes Katrina and Rita, the ASPCA wrote and spearheaded passage of comprehensive legislation requiring that disaster evacuation plans address the needs of owners of pets and service animals in Louisiana and Illinois. We helped achieve similar laws in California, Florida, Hawaii and New York. OHIO, ILLINOIS, KANSAS Challenging Breed-Specific Legislation In Ohio, the only state with breed-specific provisions in a dangerous dog law, the ASPCA submitted a friend-of-the-court brief to the state Supreme Court in a pivotal pit bull case, Toledo v Tellings. We argued that dangerous dog controls are important but should not be based on breed. At the urging of the ASPCA, the Illinois legislature adopted a resolution calling on municipalities not to adopt laws targeting specific breeds but instead to focus on education and accountability of dog owners. The Emporia City Council in Kansas rejected breed-specific regulation less than a week after officials there participated in our online "Webinar" on the topic. TENNESSEE, WEST VIRGINIA Reporting Animal Abuse Social workers in Tennessee are now required to report suspected cases of animal abuse as well as child abuse. A West Virginia law, also supported by the ASPCA, requires cross reporting of animal abuse among child and adult social workers, law enforcement officers and other agencies.
