 Malin v Cole County Prosecuting Attorney - Are county prosecuting attorney offices subject to Missouri's Sunshine Law? Facts - Aaron Malin asked the Cole County Prosecuting Attorney for certain financial records, copies of indictments, and copies of other public records requests submitted to that office. In response to each of these requests the Prosecuting Attorney claimed that every document in his office was exempt from disclosure under the Sunshine Law, he made no effort at all to locate records responsive to Malin's requests. Outcome - Victory in trial court, with the judge ordering the Prosecuting Attorney to pay the largest transparency-related civil penalty in state history as well as the plaintiff's attorney fees, the Prosecuting Attorney has appealed this case to the Missouri Court of Appeals. Malin v Metro Multi-Jurisdictional Undercover Drug Program - Are multi-jurisdictional drug task forces subject to Missouri's Sunshine Law? Facts - When Aaron Malin asked for records related to St. Louis City's drug task force, an attorney responded and told him that the police department had no such task force. Believing this could not be true, Malin pressed further and the attorney told him that he couldn't produce records of an entity that doesn't exist. Months later Malin received documents from the Missouri Department of Public Safety confirming not only that the St. Louis City task force existed, but that the attorney who had denied its existence had for years been its Authorized Official responsible for submitting grant requests and signing contracts on behalf of the task force. We sued on Malin's behalf to establish, first, that the task forces are subject to the Sunshine Law, and second, that the task force in question violated the law by refusing to respond properly to Malin's records requests. Outcome - Case went to trial in May 2018. We are still awaiting the judge's ruling. Malin v St. Louis County Multi-Jurisdictional Drug Task Force - Are multi-jurisdictional drug task forces subject to Missouri's Sunshine Law? Facts - When Aaron Malin asked the St. Louis County drug task force for copies of its executive board's meeting minutes (which the Sunshine Law requires the board to keep), the task force provided an electronic document claiming to be minutes of a meeting held several months before, but the metadata showed that the document had been created the day after Malin submitted its request. We sued on his behalf to establish, first, that the task forces are subject to the Sunshine Law, and second, that the task force in question violated the law by failing to keep minutes of its board meetings and by trying to cover up that failure by fabricating a document after Malin submitted his request. Outcome - Case scheduled for trial in September 2018.

Form 990EZ, Part III - Statement of Program Service Accomplishments

Describe the organization's program service accomplishments for each of its three largest program services, as measured by expenses. In a clear and concise manner, describe the services provided, the number of persons benefited, and other relevant information for each program title.	Expenses (Required for section 501(c)(3) and 501(c)(4) organizations; optional for others.)
30 Audrain County Sheriff's Office v Winnie - (1) May a law enforcement agency withhold records related to an investigation on the basis that the investigation is "active," when that same agency admits it has not pursued the case at all for at least eight years? (2) When a government entity sues a citizen who has filed a public records request, asserting that the government entity should not be forced to produce the requested documents, must the government pay the citizen's attorney fees? Facts - Joanna Winnie is the mother of a former member of the East Central Missouri Drug Task Force who died by a gunshot wound to the head some time after she had complained about her treatment by other members of the task force. Although her death was deemed a suicide, the polygraph test of a fellow law enforcement officer indicated deception when she denied killing Melissa Winnie. Joanna spent years trying to find out if her daughter had been murdered, but the Audrain Co Sheriff's Office refused to produce the records related to Melissa's death on the grounds that the investigation was still "active," even though they also acknowledged that it had not made any effort to investigate the case for eight years. When Aaron Malin began helping Joanna by pressuring the Sheriff's Office to produce the records, the Sheriff's Office sued both Winnie and Malin, seeking an order that the records were "closed" under the Sunshine Law. We partnered with the ACLU of Missouri to represent Winnie and Malin. Although the Sunshine Law specifies that in a government-initiated lawsuit such as this one the government must pay the defendants' attorney fees, the Sheriff's Office argued that it should not have to do so. Outcome - VICTORY. Trial court ruled that the records Winnie and Malin were seeking were open public records and ordered the Sheriff's Office to pay attorney fees in the amount of $3,325.95. Sheriff's Office did not appeal. Missouri Board of Cosmetology v Fall - Can the government prohibit African-style hair braiders from getting paid for work they could lawfully provide for free? Facts - Maty Fall learned how to braid hair as a young girl in her native country of Ghana. Although she had earned a degree and worked as an accountant in her homeland, she found that her degree and experience were not much use when she came to the United States, so she started earning a living by braiding hair. But someone turned her in to the Board of Cosmetology, and although it is perfectly lawful to braid hair for free-the Board filed suit against her to prohibit her from earning money by braiding. We defended Fall to establish that the Missouri Constitution protects citizens' rights to earn a living in a harmless, otherwise lawful profession. Outcome - VICTORY. After two years of litigation, the government dropped the case against Ms. Fall and in Spring 2018 the Missouri General Assembly passed the Hair Braiding Freedom Act, which exempted hair braiders from cosmetology licensing requirements. Calzone v Hawley - Does the Fourth Amendment permit a law enforcement officer to stop and inspect vehicles even if the officer has no reason to believe that either the vehicle or driver are in violation of any law? Facts - Ron Calzone and his wife own a horse and cattle ranch in rural Missouri, and they occasionally use a dump truck to transport materials in support of their ranch. One day as Calzone was taking the truck to pick up gravel for his daughter's chicken coop, a highway patrol officer pulled him over. The officer frankly acknowledged that he had not seen Calzone violate any law - he just didn't recognize the markings on the truck and wanted to inspect it. Calzone responded that the Fourth Amendment does not permit suspicionless searches of citizens' private property, and the officer responded that a Missouri statute specifically authorizes highway patrol officers to stop and inspect vehicles "with or without probable cause" to believe that there is a violation. We sued to establish the proposition that the Fourth Amendment does not permit roving, suspicionless searches of vehicles. Outcome - Initial loss in federal district court, but Eighth Circuit reversed and remanded to the trial court. On remand, federal district court again ruled against Calzone, case is once again pending before the Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals. (Grants $ 0) If this amount includes foreign grants, check here . . . ► <input type="checkbox"/>	30a 16,657
