In response to the COVID-19 pandemic, LPI is translating research into evidence-based policy and practice solutions. We published a report that provides an overarching framework that focuses on how policymakers and educators can support equitable, effective teaching and learning regardless of the medium through which that takes place. This framework provides research, state and local examples, and policy recommendations in 10 key areas that speak both to transforming learning and to closing opportunity and achievement gaps. It illustrates how policymakers and educators can: 1. Close the digital divide 2. Strengthen distance and blended learning 3. Assess what students need 4. Ensure supports for social and emotional learning 5. Redesign schools for stronger relationships 6. Emphasize authentic, culturally responsive learning 7. Provide expanded learning time 8. Establish community schools and wraparound supports 9. Prepare educators for reinventing school 10. Leverage more adequate and equitable school funding In the area of Educator Quality, LPI continued its work leading the Educator Preparation Laboratory, which launched in 2019 in partnership with Bank Street Graduate School of Education. The Lab is focused on providing research to support the improvement of educator preparation across the country. Our educator quality work continues to grow its program of study to inform the broader goal of ensuring that all schools and districts are led by quality leaders. We released the results of two national surveys of school leaders and undertook a deep review of the literature on effective principal preparation and in-service professional development. We continued our work tracking the educator workforce in California. In the area of Early Childhood Learning, LPI has been bringing our work on sustaining and strengthening access to high-quality and diverse early learning experiences to national audiences. At the end of May, the ECE team published a blog, Healthy Child Development Depends on Quality Child Care And So Does the Economy, as part of LPI's learning in the time of COVID-19 blog series. We continued studies on effective coaching strategies for the early childhood workforce and assessments for pre-k students. In July, the ECE team helped to lead virtual sessions as part of National Conference of State Legislatures' (NCSL) State Policy and Research for Early Education (SPREE) working group summer summit that included 17 state legislators, including education committee chairs. In these sessions we shared information from several LPI reports, including our study of state preschool implementation, review of preschool literature, and study of innovative models of teacher preparation. In the area of Equitable Resources and Education, LPI continues to work with state-facing professional associations to provide research on equitable approaches to school finance. The work this year has included studies on the impact of COVID-19 on state budgets and the costs associated with reopening schools safely. In the area of Whole Child Education, LPI has continued a number of projects focused on performance assessment, including a national initiative to reimagine college admissions and advisement using authentic student work and a national collaboration of states developing stronger science assessments. The Whole Child Education team has also produced a blog series and research brief related to community schools, which illustrate how these institutions advance a range of whole child educational practices and can be supported through partnerships and infrastructure. An LPI-led article on The Implications for Practice of the Science of Learning and Development has been widely disseminated, with 330,000 views to date, and is the basis of an initiative, in collaboration with Turnaround for Children and the Forum for Youth Investment, to develop SoLD-aligned Design Principles for schools and districts, as well as other youth-serving organizations. The goal is to create a toolkit with resources that describe structures and practices that can help transform schools and classrooms into effective, equitable environments that support the development of all learners.

Part X, Line 2:	Income Taxes - The Institute is exempt from income taxes under Section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code. The Institute has also received recognition of its exempt status from California and Washington D.C. The Institute's status as a publicly supported charity is subject to the Internal Revenue Service's (IRS) 5-year look back period which requires a reporting of the Institute's revenue sources through the end of 2020. Failure to meet the criteria for classification as a publicly supported charity could result in the Institute being declared a private foundation. The Institute has satisfied the IRS' required criteria and will be able to maintain its publicly supported charity status. The Institute has applied the accounting principles related to accounting for uncertainty in income taxes and has determined that there is no material impact on the financial statements. With some exceptions, the Institute is no longer subject to U.S. federal and state income tax examinations by tax authorities for years prior to 2016.
