Return Reference	Explanation
Part X, Line 2:	BayLegal is exempt from taxation under Internal Revenue Code Section 501(c)(3) and California Revenue and Taxation Code Section 23701d. Generally accepted accounting principles provide accounting and disclosure guidance about positions taken by an organization in its tax returns that might be uncertain. Management has considered its tax positions and believes that all of the positions taken by BayLegal in their federal and state exempt organization tax returns are more likely than not to be sustained upon examination. BayLegal's returns are subject to examination by federal and state taxing authorities, generally for three and four years, respectively, after they are filed.

Form 990, Part III, Line 1, Description of Organization Mission:	BayLegal's services impact clients in significant ways, including preventing homelessness, establishing safety and protection from abuse for domestic violence victims and their children, securing vital healthcare services to treat physical and mental health conditions, and securing income or alleviating predatory debt to help individuals and families living in poverty to provide for food, rent, and other necessities of life. Often, BayLegal is able to resolve multiple interconnected issues for families to improve their overall self-sufficiency and quality of life. BayLegal impacts the community through extensive outreach and education, technical assistance provided to other community and governmental agencies, systemic advocacy and impact litigation. The following client story provides a brief example of how BayLegal's services change lives: BayLegal's client was receiving social security disability benefits for several years because of a condition that made sustained employment difficult and often impossible. In recent years, the client found part-time employment and reported the income to the Social Security Administration (SSA) as required to maintain eligibility. In the spring of 2020, an illness prohibited continued work. During this period of health problems and unemployment, the client received a notice that SSA would be terminating all benefits and holding the client liable for an overpayment due to "unreported income". Despite multiple attempts to address the inaccurate termination, the client was unable to navigate SSA COVID-19 related closures and service reductions. Facing benefit cutoff, the client contacted BayLegal's Legal Advice Line. BayLegal attorneys navigated the SSA system during COVID and submitted necessary paperwork to preserve benefits and have the overpayment rescinded. BayLegal also balances its direct individual services with systemic work to address root causes of issues harming low-income residents and extend our impact at a scale far beyond the tens of thousands of individual clients and family members we serve directly each year. By working directly with clients, BayLegal develops expert knowledge of the problems that cause poor people harm and impede their struggle for self-sufficiency. Systemic work, informed by our work with clients, includes impact litigation, legislative and administrative advocacy, and training, technical assistance and policy development for agencies that administer housing, healthcare and benefits programs for the Bay Area's low income residents. The following case provides a clear example of how BayLegal's systemic work has widespread impact: Anderson vs. City of San Jose: In this case Bay Area Legal Aid, along with co-counsel from the Public Interest Law Project and Public Advocates, argued that charter cities like San Jose are not exempt from the state Surplus Land Act. This legislation requires local governments to prioritize affordable housing uses when disposing of surplus government land. In November 2019, California's Sixth Appellate District Court of Appeal affirmed that charter cities must comply with state law. In March 2020, the California Supreme Court declined to review the case leaving the lower court decision intact. The ruling will affect all 121 charter cities in California-among them the state's largest cities including Los Angeles, San Diego, San Francisco, and Oakland along with San Jose). Low-income San Jose residents Sarah Anderson and Joana Cruz, and nonprofit organizations Urban Habitat Program and Housing California brought this case in 2016 to challenge San Jose's adoption of a policy that conflicts with the Surplus Land Act, and to enforce legal protections for the development of affordable housing. Beyond impact litigation like Anderson vs. City of San Jose, BayLegal also works in collaboration with public agencies and as an advocate to remove barriers to healthcare and public benefits access, design systems that meet low-income clients where they are, and change regulations and procedures to better meet client needs. A significant example of this work from 2020 is: In Alameda County, a young man who had previously been in foster care reached out to Bay Area Legal Aid's Youth Justice unit for help. He was seeking help to remain in his transitional housing through California's THP-Plus Extension, which allows former foster youth to continue receiving support after they would normally "age out" of the system so long as they remain enrolled in school. Unfortunately, at that time Alameda County was not participating in the THP-Plus Extension. While negotiating a temporary agreement keeping the client housed, our attorneys began advocating for Alameda County to adopt the THP-Plus Extension plan in order to provide a longer-term solution for our client and other former foster youth in the same situation. We partnered with foster youth serving organizations to develop recommendations for non-participating counties to create more housing options for THP-Plus youth. The CA Department of Social Services agreed to distribute these recommendations to all counties. Following the state's action and a meeting with Alameda County Social Services, the county agreed to opt in to the THP-Plus Extension on a temporary basis. These changes meant that our client was able to remain in transitional housing until the end of 2020, giving him time to establish school enrollment and develop a more permanent housing transition plan to mitigate the threat of suddenly becoming unhoused during the Covid-19 pandemic. The value of these services for a single individual over this period is estimated at $15,000, and is potentially several times more than this when considering the long-term costs of school dropout, wage loss, and incarceration that this educational and housing support help to prevent. Our advocacy at the county and state level has helped to ensure that this level of support extends to hundreds and potentially thousands of other former foster youth in Alameda County and statewide. Whether directly engaged in alleviating the costs of poverty and returning financial assets to low-income families and communities, or addressing conditions of safety and security that in turn make participation in safety net programs, work, and economic activity more accessible to survivors of interpersonal violence, BayLegal's services ultimately work to interrupt the legal inequities that can underlie and reinforce long-term cycles of poverty. Recent studies have confirmed that investing in legal services is a cost effective means of solving issues faced by low-income people, and our own data confirms that every dollar invested in our annual budget has produced between $1.75 and $2.50 in economic benefits directly returned to low-income families and communities in each of the past five years. Due to the COVID-19 pandemic, BayLegal has experienced a rising demand for legal services across our seven county service region. We continue to strategically develop our program to ensure it is responsive to the ongoing and emerging needs of the diverse populations it serves.
