EducationChildren Now's education program aims to ensure every child has access to high-quality early learning opportunities, a rigorous TK-12 education, including high-quality STEM and quality afterschool and summer programs, and access to affordable higher education. Through research and analysis, policy development, education and outreach, communications, convenings and advocacy, we have worked to dismantle inequitable and racially discriminatory systems and have achieved the following: helped improve access to quality child care and preschool programs; supported increasing reimbursement rates for preschool and child care providers; supported significant progress, including the development of a growth measure to better track student progress, towards building a transparent and student-focused education accountability system that helps ensure all children graduate from high school ready for college, career and civic life; protected TK-12 education funding by blocking proposed cuts to summer meals and overall cuts to education; ensured minimum requirements for distance learning including ensuring that districts provide all students with devices and connectivity, track student participation and assess progress and communicate with parents; expanded the membership of the California STEM Network and engaged the Network in key STEM issues, including increasing access to STEM education and preparing new STEM teachers, early math instruction and educator professional development, afterschool programs in computer science, and high school to community college pathways in STEM; continued to lead efforts to help ensure the implementation of Next Generation Science Standards, which updated standards and accreditation and testing for teacher preparation and credentialing; continued leadership role around the effective implementation of the Local Control Funding Formula, working to ensure dollars intended for English Learners, students in deep poverty and youth in foster care actually reach those students; achieved important revisions to the Local Control and Accountability Plan template to promote effective fiscal transparency, including the inclusion of clear tables to track funding at the local level; led efforts to ensure implementation of the English Learner Roadmap, to provide professional development for educators to learn how to address the unique needs of students who are English Learners; continued to promote transparent and accessible data in the state's longitudinal integrated data system, including working to ensure clearer references to early learning data and the creation of a stakeholder engagement process; led a new research project to identify evidence-based teacher recruitment, preparation and retention programs that are proven effective at training highly qualified diverse teachers; and promoted substantial improvements to K-12 course access and instructional quality around math and science to increase access to higher education for all students.

Child WelfareChildren Now's child welfare program works to address the comprehensive health, education, and social service needs of children in the child welfare system. Through our research, policy development, education, and communication efforts, we have achieved the following: led efforts to protect the Family Urgent Response System (FURS), a statewide, 24/7 hotline to support foster youth and their caregivers in times of crisis; helped relaunch FURS implementation efforts with the state, counties and other stakeholders to develop and finalize guidance and policies to help ensure youth in foster care and caregivers can access immediate, trauma-informed supports during the pandemic and beyond; helped ensure foster families did not experience a disruption to their child care during the pandemic by successfully getting the state to allow counties to extend the timeline for an Emergency Child Care Bridge Program voucher if the voucher was set to expire during the state of emergency; worked to protect the needs of foster children and youth and their caregivers are met when disaster strikes through the Child Welfare Disaster Response Fund; continued to work with the state on the Continuum of Care Reform, an effort to recruit and retain foster parents and ensure all children in foster care are raised in stable, supportive family homes; worked to stabilize foster youth housing and highlighted the need for transitional housing programs to support programming for parenting foster youth in extended foster care and reflect the variability of housing costs across the state; secured a number of state budget investments to address the substantial risk facing kids in foster care in the midst of COVID-19, including: higher monthly reimbursement rates for foster families impacted by COVID-19, increased access to technology to connect children and youth to education and other supports, and temporarily expanded eligibility for extended foster care to allow young people turning 21 to continue to participate in the program; conducted research, analyzed guidance, and collaborated with partners nationally and statewide to identify best practices and generate recommendations for implementing the Family First Prevention Services Act in California; and analyzed disparities in K-12 educational attainment of students in foster care, to highlight barriers and develop solutions to address these challenges.

Research and Data CollectionChildren Now's research program produces comprehensive reports, fact sheets, infographics, and data-driven policy briefs on topics related to our program areas. We produce two marquee publications: 1) the California Children's Report Card, which provides up-to-date data on the status of California's children, highlights outcomes disparities resulting from decades of institutional racism, addresses recent policy developments, and delivers research and data-driven recommendations for improving children's well-being, and 2) the California County Scorecard of Children's Well-Being, which provides policymakers and a diverse range of community leaders and other stakeholders a unique and consumable analysis with county and state level data, by race and ethnicity, and measures the data relative to other counties. This interactive online advocacy and data tool provides a user-friendly interface so viewers can understand counties' unique strengths and vulnerabilities in meeting children's needs, as well as serious inequities in child well-being. The organization also released several research briefs and data profiles, including: an advanced policy analysis on increasing access to school-based mental health in California; a research brief analyzing the current Medi-Cal performance landscape and guidance for improving data collection; an interactive state and 58 county analysis of Medi-Cal managed care for children in California; a behavioral health policy agenda for children and youth; an infographic illustrating the opportunity gap for children in various regions within Contra Costa County; an analysis of poll and focus group results of California parents of young children on their attitudes around child care and early learning opportunities; a policy brief on the impact of COVID-19 on students in foster care; an infographic on the impact of COVID-19 on children, youth, and their families; a fact sheet highlighting the importance of including youth and families contribute in policy decision-making in child-serving programs; a fact sheet on the use of Proposition 56 funds for children's health in Medi-Cal; and an infographic about social-emotional learning and opportunity gaps. Our marquee publications and numerous data reports and briefs are widely distributed to the general public, including all state and local policy makers, the media, service providers, coalition partners, and civic organizations. These research publications, as well as the outreach efforts, briefings, and widespread media coverage generated by their release, help motivate key stakeholders and policymakers to make children's issues a top priority, both locally and at the state level.
