With research grants from AFSA, talented scientists advance the understanding of fibromyalgia. AFSA's primary research goal is to fund projects designed to explain the physiology of fibromyalgia so better treatments can be tested. AFSA remains one of the only nonprofits funding biomedical studies on this condition and our awards program is essential for progress in the field. Our 2019 funded project results were published online ahead of print April 2023 in the journal PAIN (with a summary posted to our website), and the study showed low level inflammation throughout the brain. In addition, partial results from the 2020 funded project appeared in March 2023 in the journal Pain, Behavior, and Immunity, and the study showed an abnormal immune response to an immune challenge. Additional findings to correlate the brain imaging results with blood markers are due to be published in 2024. Furthermore, now that these two projects are done, AFSA has announced a request for applications to fund five more projects. Over 60 fibromyalgia researchers from around the world have been solicited to submit an application before the March 1, 2024 deadline.
